

Parents: What You Do Matters

There are a lot of things that influence our children — their friends, the movies, television shows. But year after year, research continues to show that parents are still the most influential people in a child's life. What parents do, what they say and what they believe does matter. (Although it doesn't always feel that way!)

Now Stacey DeWitt speaks to parents about taking back that "power" and using their positive influence to raise safe, healthy and successful children.

In 1998, Stacey founded Atlanta-based Connect with Kids to support her passion for helping children. Stacey is a former child advocate with the juvenile justice system, an attorney, and a television journalist. Parents tell us her talks are encouraging, compelling and right on target. Connect with Kids produces news, television programs and parenting DVDs focused on the issues children face every day. The programs have won Emmys and Parents' Choice Awards, and have been featured on the Dr. Phil Show, Good Morning America, CNN and more. The DVDs are also used in thousands of schools across the country.

During each inspiring workshop, Stacey provides a viewing of one of Connect with Kids' award-winning half-hour DVDs — programs that feature real children sharing the true challenges they've faced and the dreams they've achieved... with advice and solutions from the country's top experts. Stacey has been the executive producer of more than 100 Connect with Kids DVDs — giving parents a glimpse into the lives of children and what they can do to help their kids make good decisions.

Topics include:

- ▶ Bullying
- ▶ Safety on the Internet and online networks such as Myspace.com
- ▶ Sports and competition
- ▶ Dating safety
- ▶ Driving safety
- ▶ Alcohol and drug trends
- ▶ Body image
- ▶ Self-esteem
- ▶ Academic pressures and ethics
- ▶ Sexual safety
- ▶ Dozens more

Whatever your youth topic, Stacey can address it with experience, compassion, real solutions and a common sense approach to parenting. After all, Stacey and her husband, Sam, are also the parents of a pre-teen son and a teenager daughter. Stacey not only talks about the important roles parents play, she tries to live it each day!
